

General Medical Emergency Response

When a person is found seriously ill or injured anywhere on the premises of the University, activate the general emergency response as outlined below:

The staff member who encounters the victim(s) should immediately call for help and request that University Police be contacted.

University Police will perform an initial assessment and institute emergency care.

Depending upon the assessment, the victim will be brought to Health Services, or an ambulance will be contacted for medical assistance and transport.

- If calling 4911, remain calm, speak slowly and clearly, give your exact location and give your telephone number.
- A University Police Officer will remain with the victim, providing emergency care until EMS arrives.
