Explorations in Paper: studio work from the Vermont Studio Center

This ongoing series uses various physical manipulations of paper (folding, scoring, tearing, layering) to make images in response to current events.

The images originate in photographs with tension added through the use of an unexpected, and not easily controlled, medium.

The Feedback Loop Project

The Feedback Loop Project is a collaborative visual art and audio processing project performed by Tim McDonald (drawing) and Christian Gentry (audio processing). This project explores the intersections of the visual and aural through the performance of process. The artists' main goals in this project are to create an intimate creative space where their notions of their respective fields of artistry are simultaneously challenged and affirmed by coming together as a unique "performed" installation.
