Celina Chan RD, LDN, CLC is a registered dietitian and certified lactation counselor. She graduated from the University of Massachusetts Amherst with a degree in Nutrition and completed her Dietetic Internship at Keene State College in New Hampshire. For the last four years, she has been dedicated to working in the specialty area of Pediatric Nutrition. Her experience began at Boston Medical Center, which involved caring for infants and children with malnutrition, prematurity, drug exposure, and complex newborn course in the outpatient setting. She has conducted in-home and school visits for her patients as a continuation of their medical nutrition therapy. Her passion for community and clinical nutrition go hand-in-hand. Celina has volunteered at breastfeeding support groups (“baby cafes”) in the Boston area through the Vital Village Network. Her love for pediatric nutrition has continued to evolve through her current role at Boston Children’s Hospital. She cares for a wide range of pediatric patients, from infancy to adolescence, with a diverse range of medical conditions including enteral feedings, autism, failure to thrive, overweight/obesity, congenital abnormalities, allergies, picky eating, feeding difficulties, and more.

REGISTRATION LINK:
https://us02web.zoom.us/meeting/register/tZ0pcumggDoiHJNJac6uB6enXMaF6Y0-6mJd3

For more information, contact Dr. Jerusha Nelson-Peterman via email at jnelsonpeterman@framingham.edu. Learn about disability accommodations for university events at: www.framingham.edu/accessibility.