

Rights and Terms of Use for Material Posted in *Digital Commons at Framingham State University

For works without a Creative Commons license

For previously published works (journal articles, book chapters, etc.) for which the publisher retains the copyright, permission has been granted (where necessary) to post the material on Digital Commons at Framingham State University. For any use, which exceeds personal use or fair use, permission may be required by the copyright owner of the material. For guidance on fair use, please visit Code of Best Practices in Fair Use for Academic and Research Libraries <http://www.arl.org/pp/ppcopyright/codefairuse/index.shtml>.

For theses, dissertations, or other previously unpublished scholarly or creative works, the right to download or print any portion of this material is granted by the copyright owner only for the personal or educational use. The author/creator retains all proprietary rights, including copyright ownership. Any editing, other reproduction or other use of the materials by any means requires the express written permission of the copyright owner.

Except as provided above, or for any other use that is allowed by fair use (Title 17, §107 U.S.C.), you may not reproduce, republish, post, transmit or distribute any material from this web site in any physical or digital form without the permission of the copyright owner of the material.

If you have questions about permitted uses for any content in this database, please contact Millie Gonzalez at vgonzalez@framingham.edu.

Creative Commons-Licensed Works posted in *Digital Commons at Framingham State University

For works posted in Digital Commons at Framingham State University that display a Creative Commons license in their record and/or on the work itself, the use of that work is governed by the terms of the license selected by the content creator.

For more information about Creative Commons licenses, or to license your own work, please visit <http://creativecommons.org/choose/>.

Copyright

For previously published full-text materials (e.g. journal articles), Henry Whittemore Library reviews the copyright status of each item, and every effort is made to ensure that process to archive and display the material through Digital Commons at Framingham State University is in compliance with copyright holders' stated policies.

For unpublished materials (e.g. student coursework, theses/dissertations, faculty or student conference presentations, etc.) assurances are received from the creator(s) during the submission process that, if necessary, permission has been obtained from owners of third-party copyrighted materials included in the unpublished work. In the instance of a wherein a formal submission agreement is not received, it is assumed that the creator of the work is not knowingly submitting infringing material.

The Library does not review for compliance with copyright law the content of all such scholarly or creative unpublished materials that are submitted to Digital Commons at Framingham State University. Furthermore, the Library fully supports the right of our community members to make fair use of copyright materials (as outlined in Section 107 of Title 17 U.S. Code) in the creation of their own works. Digital Commons at Framingham State University administrators will not make a fair use determination of submitted work; such a determination is considered to be the responsibility of the creator(s). However, in instances when it is readily and reasonably apparent that copyright law would be violated by posting a work, Digital Commons at Framingham State University administrators may request that the creator(s) obtain permission from any relevant copyright holder(s).

Removal of content or Take-Down Requests

The repository is intended to be a permanent scholarly record; therefore, removing content from public viewing is strongly discouraged. There may be times, however, when it is necessary for authors or repository administrators to remove or update content in the repository. Under most circumstances a citation to the removed content will remain. Authors will be notified by the repository administrator before removal of any content. Authors wishing to remove or update their content should contact the repository administrator at vgonzalez@framingham.edu.

Persons who have questions, or who believe that their copyrights have been infringed upon by the posting of material to Digital Commons at Framingham State University, may contact the administrators at vgonzalez@framingham.edu.

Requests to remove materials from Digital Commons at Framingham State University should include:

1. A physical or electronic signature of the owner, or authorized agent of the owner, of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed.
2. Clear identification of the copyrighted work(s) claimed to have been infringed.
3. Clear identification of the material in Digital Commons at Framingham State University that is claimed to be infringing, including the URL(s).
4. Information reasonably sufficient to permit the Library to contact the complaining party, such as an address, telephone number, and if available, an email address at which the complaining party may be contacted.
5. A statement that the complaining party has a good faith belief that use of the material in the manner complained of is not authorized by the copyright owner, its agent or the law.
6. A statement that the information in the notification is accurate, and if applicable, that the complaining party is authorized to act on behalf of the owner of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed.

The library will respond to all questions or requests. If the Library is not able to determine that the use of the work in question is lawful, access to the work through Digital Commons at Framingham State University will be removed.

Update to the Submission

The repository is intended to be a permanent scholarly record. Authors may request that the updated documents be posted. Posting updated versions along with the original material is the preferred way to show the progress of research.